Rep. Chu and Sen. Nelson Introduce Bicameral Bill to Increase Access to Mental Health Care in Schools

WASHINGTON, DC – Today, U.S. Representative Judy Chu (CA-27) and Senator Bill Nelson (D-FL) introduced the Increasing Access to Mental Health in Schools Act. This legislation would establish a grant program to increase the number of mental health professionals at low income schools by supporting partnerships between institutions of higher education and local education agencies to support teaching, training, and employment of school counselors, social workers, and psychologists. Professionals that participate in these partnerships would be eligible for student loan forgiveness after 5 years of employment at a low income school. Rep. Chu, one of two psychologists in Congress, and Sen. Nelson released the following statements:

“It is clear that our schools need more resources to adequately provide for the mental health of our students. Right now, far too many mental health problems go undiagnosed and untreated because our schools lack the funding and staff needed to spot and address a problem early on,” said Rep. Chu. “But beyond our basic obligation to ensure the health of our students, this problem is also taking on new urgency as the scourge of mass shootings in schools becomes more and more common. First, I want to be clear on two important points: people struggling with mental health problems are far more likely to be victims of crime than perpetrators of it. And America’s gun violence epidemic is caused by contributing factors such as our weak gun laws. But, in addition to strengthening our country’s gun laws, greater access to mental health professionals can make a profound difference in students’ lives. This legislation aims to put more qualified professionals in schools that wouldn’t otherwise be able to support them, and also encourages more people to enter psychology and counseling as a career by defraying some costs in exchange for their service to our communities. This is a smart bill. It helps students, school districts, and the mental health services professions. All while meeting an urgent need. I’m grateful for Senator Nelson’s work to introduce this bill in the Senate and I hope to see it receive consideration in both chambers of Congress.”

“We can’t allow what happened in Parkland and in Texas to become the new normal in this country,” said Sen. Nelson. “We have to do more to protect our kids in school and ensure that any student who needs mental health services is able to get them.”

The bill is supported by the American Psychological Association.

Supervisors Say No to Proposed Federal Gag Order Prohibiting Medical Discussion around Family Planning

Last week, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services issued proposed rules that would undercut the Title X family planning program, which underwrites the costs of contraception, reproductive health services, and STD screenings and serves overwhelmingly young, female, and low-income patients. In response to this attack on a woman’s right to choose, today the Board of Supervisors approved a motion, authored by Supervisor Hilda L. Solis, to send a 5-signature letter to the Department and Secretary Alex M. Azar II opposing the proposed changes.

“Access to proper health care and reproductive health services are basic human rights,” said Supervisor Solis. “Every patient needs to be fully informed and have access to all of their health options. The Trump Administration’s proposed gag rule would infringe upon the Constitutional rights of patients nationwide. The Supreme Court has repeatedly upheld a woman’s right to choose, and this Administration’s attack on women’s health and family planning has no place in today’s modern society.”

The Department of Health and Human Services’ proposed changes would require facilities receiving federal family planning funds to be physically separate from those that perform abortion. It would also prevent women with unintended pregnancies from being counseled on their full range of reproductive options, and the gag rule would also ban a physician from making a referral for abortion for a female patient.

Today’s actions by the Board of Supervisors signify a clear and unified opposition to the federal government’s plan to eliminate informed and proper care to patients and L.A. County residents. An array of providers would be affected, including Planned Parenthood. In 2016, Title X served four million patients at just under 4,000 sites.
